He was born in 1943, in the small country town of Bacchus Marsh, where "kids left school at 14 and had their teeth pulled for a quid so that they wouldn't have any trouble with them later". The boy from Bacchus Marsh, who now lives and teaches in New York, speaks to Elizabeth Alley.

THE STORYTELLERS, Concert FM, 7.30pm

Sue Thomas has years of fashion experience under her belt - though whether that's a cinch belt, narrow leather plait, silk sash or cummerbund, we couldn't tell you. Sue, who talks clothes to Linda Rose today, is a senior lecturer in fashion at Wellington Polytechnic. And, although she's only been in New Zealand for a few months, the English designer thinks it's an exciting and creative time to be here. Kiwi fashion, she points out, reflects our sporting activities, the Maori and Pacific Island cultures, music and, yes, even the communications boom and the Internet. "People say we're miles away from anywhere, and yes, we are, geographically, but a lot of stuff that one is doing nowadays is not confined by geography. It's about ideas and inspiration."
